It's for fun, not for The Heart of Rock & Roll The Old Globe The Heart of Rock & Roll is a song performed by Huey Lewis and the News, released as the third single from their album Sports in 1984. The single peaked at #1 on the US Billboard Hot 100. It was the second single from their second studio album. The song's success helped propel the band to international fame. The song features a driving rhythm section, catchy melody, and a sing-along chorus that became a staple of 1980s pop music. The music video, directed by Andrew Robinson, features the band performing in a warehouse setting with visual effects created by Martin Smith. The video includes footage of the band's performances along with scenes of fans wearing the band's merchandise. The song remains a staple of classic rock radio and has been included on various greatest hits compilations and cover albums. The success of the song has led to its inclusion in many film and television soundtracks, further cementing its place in pop culture. The song's popularity has also led to its use in commercials and other marketing campaigns. Overall, the song is a significant moment in the band's career and a testament to the power of well-crafted pop songs.
